ABSTRACT

This publication contains a listing of governmental and nongovernmental organizations and agencies in metropolitan Washington, D.C. having substantial African programs or projects. These activities include both operations in Africa and programs conducted within the United States and elsewhere which are Africa-related. The groups described are involved with many different kinds of programs. For example, some provide communications and information services on African affairs. Some are concerned with African studies or improving the quality of education and cultural exchange. Other groups are involved in economic research, protection of wildlife, technical assistance, rural development, and the preservation of Black heritage. The listing is alphabetical within two sections, one for nongovernmental organizations and a second for governmental offices. Information provided for each group includes address, telephone number, and a description of the group and its focus. For some groups, the names of officers and titles of publications are provided. The response form used to gather the information is provided. (RM)

INTRODUCTION

In 1975 the African Bibliographic Center published AF-LOG: African Interests of American Organizations, describing the African programs of more than 1,600 American organizations and institutions. At that time, the Center made a commitment to continue to update AF-LOG with supplementary editions. This, then, is AF-LOG II, a listing of governmental and non-governmental organizations and agencies in metropolitan Washington, D.C., having considerable Africa programs or projects. These activities include both operations in Africa and programs conducted within the United States and elsewhere which are Africa-related.

It should be emphasized that the inclusion or omission of an organization, or the length of its description, does not reflect any qualitative evaluation of that organization or its activities. In some cases more information is included for lesser-known organizations simply for the reader's benefit, whereas descriptions of large, active institutions are necessarily limited. It has also been impossible to research the multitude of consulting groups and businesses in Washington, D.C., and its vicinity which from time to time undertake contractual projects on Africa for government agencies and/or African institutions. Those which have come to our attention through sustained Africa programs are included.

Users of this reference tool should be aware that HABARI, ABC's daily telephonic information and news service on African affairs (202-659-2529), frequently reports on the establishment of or the ongoing activities of many of the organizations and institutions cited in this volume for user updating purposes. Transcripts of these daily reports with additional information are available on a subscription basis. Other publications from this office which may be of interest to the users of this reference work include our quarterly journal: A CURRENT BIBLIOGRAPHY ON AFRICAN AFFAIRS; the bi-monthly SADEX: THE SOUTHERN AFRICA DEVELOPMENT INFORMATION/DOCUMENTATION EXCHANGE; and other irregularly issued titles in our Special Bibliographic Series (Nunez - Dictionary of Afro-Latin Civilization - 1980); and Current Reading List Series (Kornegay - The Candidates & Africa: Analysis of the 1980 Presidential Election and Its Implications for U.S.-African Relations - 1980).

Readers may be also interested to know that two additional publications drawing from the original 1975 compendium of information published in AF-LOG include: a Scholar's Guide to Washington, D.C. for African Studies, by Purnima Mehta Bhatt (Smithsonian Institution Press for The Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, P.O. Box 1579, Washington, D.C. 20013, $19.95 (clothbound) and $7.95 (paperbound)); and the forthcoming 1980/81 African/American Directory: "The First and Only Reference Book on American Business Interests in Africa," to be published by Cooper/Lang Communications, Inc. in 1981.

Available for $115.00 and $60.00 for non-profit organizations and students from Watergate Suite 850, 600 New Hampshire Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037, (202) 543-2592.

Information received by the African Bibliographic Center for Af-Log II regarding new organizations, organizational changes, and changes of address were incorporated up to the time of the final compilation, early December, 1980. A number of governmental positions are listed as vacant, due to the transition in Administrations at this time. We invite users of AF-LOG II to bring to our attention any omissions or errors in the text for correction in future editions. Organizations are invited to continue to supply data on their activities for inclusion in future directories; copies of a response form are provided in the back of the directory for this purpose.

We hope that AF-LOG II will continue the tradition of usefulness begun with the first AF-LOG.
